DANIEL—THOMAS

A wedding of much interest took place at the United church manse at Hillcrest on Saturday morning, when Miss Lorna Thomas, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Thomas, was united in marriage to Isaac, only son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Daniel, both of Hillcrest, Rev. John Wood officiating.

The bride was dressed in a royal blue crepe dress with matching hat and black gloves. She was attended by Miss Margaret Kyle, who chose a navy blue crepe dress with matching hat.

The groom was supported by Mr. Lou Thomas, brother of the bride.

Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents. Tables were beautifully decorated with red roses and carnations, while a two-tiered wedding cake, surmounted by a church and bell, occupied a prominent position on the main table.

At 1:30 p.m. the newlyweds left by car for Lethbridge to spend a short honeymoon. Upon their return they will take up residence in Hillcrest, where the groom is employed as carpenter with the Hillcrest Collieries.

Many citizens of several sections of the province are making arrangements to hold meetings for the purpose of discussing the reduction of the number of members of our provincial legislature. They are of the opinion that we do not need so many as we now have.

DRIVERS' LICENSE PLAN PROTESTED

Protests against the provincial government diverting revenue from drivers' licenses to the general fund of the province were expressed at the recent annual meeting of the Edmonton branch of the Alberta Motor Association.

A resolution adopted by the meeting drew attention to the fact that heavy taxation is imposed at the present time in this province.

The resolution declared that it was "unreasonable and unfair" for the government to exact the levy on drivers purely for revenue purposes.

Fearing of members was that if the proceeds from the drivers' licenses were used directly in the interests of motorists, it would be a different matter. But to collect around $120,000 a year on the $1 annual license basis for revenue purposes only, met objection and criticism.

Attitude of the Edmonton branch on this question undoubtedly created fresh interest in any discussion of this matter at the annual convention of the Alberta Motor Association to be held at Calgary.

SPECIAL FARES FOR YULETIDE HOLIDAYS

Reduction of railway fares by the Canadian Pacific Railway for the Christmas and New Year's season is announced by J. B. Parker, western secretary of the Canadian Passenger Association, and means a holiday gift for hundreds of travellers who will spend the Yuletide at home, wherever that may be.

For Christmas, going on sale from Dec. 23rd to Dec. 26th, the rate is a fare and a quarter for return fares, with returning date Dec. 27th. The same rate is offered for New Year's Day, good from Dec. 30th to Jan. 2nd, with return until Jan. 3rd, 1939.

For the entire Christmas and New Year's holidays, and on sale from Dec. 26th to Jan. 2nd, inclusive, and good to return until Jan. 7th, the rate is fare and one-third.

ALBERTA TO PROBE RADIO TUBE PRICE

Appointment of R. J. Gaunt, solicitor to the trades and industry department, as a commissioner to investigate the reported enhanced price of radio tubes in Alberta, was announced at Edmonton last week end by Hon. E. C. Manning, minister of trade and industry.

MINE DISASTER IN CAPE BRETON

Nineteen men were killed, and about fifty injured, mostly seriously, when a cable snapped and allowed a mine train carrying about 200 men to careen down into the coal pit under Sydney harbor on Tuesday morning. All twenty-six cars were piled up in a tangled mass, a mile and a quarter down, making rescue work exceedingly difficult.

Alberta Liquor Control Board's profits for the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1938, netted $2,532,750. The dry belt is evidently becoming more extensive. Another argument for irrigation.—Reckliff Review.

Unity For Canada

Future Of The Dominion Depends On A Wider Outlook

Necessity of consolidating the Dominion and guarding against the danger of four or five separate sovereign states in Canada was stressed at a public meeting in Halifax by Charlotte Whitton, Dominion Secretary of the Council of Social Agencies.

Future of the Dominion depended on the Canada-wide outlook of the citizens and the necessity of knowledge from coast to coast of the economic, labor and social needs of the entire country, she declared. Unity in the Dominion was important.

Miss Whitton outlined four points she felt were outstanding in uniting the Dominion:

1. A definite planning of the external relations between the United States and the United Kingdom.
2. Planned economy at home with distribution and settlement of labor.
3. A national-wide organization of the employment of labor and resources.
4. An organized scheme of social service.

Low Pay For Teachers

Would Eventually Drive Best Type Out Of Profession

Those who advocate low salaries for school teachers neglect to consider two important facts. One is that the profession must be made attractive to the best of our young men and young women, and one of the most effective ways of making it attractive is to pay higher salaries. The second is that unduly low pay for teachers will mean that fewer and fewer will enter the teaching profession, with an eventual serious shortage of school-instructors.

When we are dealing with the future of our country, we cannot afford to be penny-pinching. The very highest type of young men and women are needed to guide and influence our boys and girls, and they cannot be obtained unless salaries are paid commensurate with their needs and requirements.—Guelph Mercury.

Strong Jaws

The greatest strength of the wolf lies in its jaws, which are perhaps more powerful than those of any dog. They have often cut through half-inch manila ropes with their jaws with one clip. And for this reason alone it is believed by most hunters that no dog known to man can single-handed conquer a full grown Gray Wolf—Wildlife Workers.

The first man to prove that the progress of sound through any medium depends upon the elasticity and density of that medium, was Sir Isaac Newton.

Old Days On The Prairie

Mounted Police Survivor, Who Went West in 1876

James Fullwood, oldest survivor of the Royal North West Mounted Police, says there was no romance in western Canada police work in his day—it was plain hard work.

Fullwood, fifty despite his 86 years, was constable No. 160 in the first detachment of 300 that went to the prairies in 1874, to help suppress arms and liquor dealing among the Indians.

The liquor traders, he told reporters, "used to supply the Indians with alcohol which had only been slightly diluted with water. Indians had a craving for it, and I have known a brave to give his head and furs for a small bottle."

"The traders worked at night and we usually had work from the Indians themselves that they were afraid," he continued. "A patrol of five of us would gallop into the traders' camp and hold them up while we searched for arms. One of the first things we did was to smash the bottles of alcohol."

"Our commanding officer had the powers of a magistrate and he used to try to sentence the men on the spot. If a man committed a murder he would be taken to the nearest town and hanged."

Pay in those days was very poor. Fullwood says. He got 75 cents a day, a little bit buffalo meat and slept where he could.

There was nothing like romance depicted in motion pictures about the force, he declared. "Mostly it was just straightforward police work on horseback. There is even less romance nowadays about the aeroplane replacing the horse as a means of rounding up criminals."

Fullwood has a prize possession—a letter from Thomas Edison, whom he met in 1898. Edison then was a struggling newboy.

Just before his death the old inventor wrote him, recalling old times.

Study The Constitution

Senate Will Examine Legislation Passed Since 1867

During the forthcoming parliamentary session, the Senate will engage itself largely with a study of Canada's constitution. To this end the Upper House, in the closing days of the last session, voted funds to enable its law clerk, W. O'Connor, to prosecute a study of the subject.

Mr. O'Connor's assignment authorized him to examine all legislation passed since 1867 amending the British North America Act. He has also been studying various judgments on constitutional points handed down by the judicial committee of the Imperial Privy Council since Confederation. Mr. O'Connor will present a report to the Senate when the house opens.

Among other things the Senate will probably resume its study of the railway problem. Last session two months were occupied in an exhaustive survey of Canadian railways, particularly with a view to easing the burden on the shoulders of the taxpayers.

The likelihood is national defence problems also will loom large in the proceedings of the Upper House.

Signalman Saved Train

Quick Action Turned Smash Into Comparatively Minor Bump

Southern Railway signalman Robert W. Kelso, of Mayflower-road, Stockwell, England, averted London's worst train smash in years, and turned it into a comparatively minor "bump."

From his box at Herne Hill, S.E., during the afternoon rush hour, Kelso saw an electric train, a "local," pulling out of the station.

He knew the main line Victoria-Ramsgate express was due.

He jammed all signals at danger, grabbed a red flag, leaped down the steps, set off along the line as fast as he could run.

The express roared into sight and brakes screamed as he driver saw the red flag.

Just before it came to rest it crashed into the guard's van of the electric train.

Ten persons were injured or had shock.

His Candid Opinion

The master of ceremonies, after a flowery speech, exclaimed: "Gentlemen, the toast is the ladies—God bless them; they are the sweets of life."

A bachelor rose to support the toast.

"Gentlemen," he said, "it is quite right what my friend says—the ladies are the sweets of life. One half of them are acid drops and the other half are humpbacks!"

Remember—a telephone pole never hit an automobile and trains don't chase cars down the road. Let them alone and they'll let you alone.

Hawaii produces about 216,000,000 cans of pineapple annually. Placed side by side, these cans could reach halfway around the world.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

DECEMBER 11

THE SIN OF COVETOUSNESS

Golden text: Thou shalt not covet. Exodus 20:17.

Lesson: Exodus 20:17; Luke 12:15-21; Timothy 6:6-10.

Devotional reading: Proverbs 22:22-23.

The Tenth Commandment: The Sin of Covetousness: Exodus 20:17. Thou shalt not covet. This commandment differs from all the others in that it has to do with a man's relation to himself, his inmost thoughts. Rather than being a law against acts, it directs man to control impulses which which may lead to acts. It legislates for the control of thoughts and desires. Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life. Proverbs 4:23.

Desire in itself is not evil. Covetousness goes far beyond desire. "To covet is the first pleasure in what is seen as belonging to another, to cherish desire for its possession and use, to set the heart on it, to yearn and long for it, to break the God-ordained barriers in order to reach and possess."

The commandment specifies objects which in those early days were desired—"thy neighbor's house, thy neighbor's wife, his man-servant, his maid-servant, his ox, his ass," anything that was his neighbor's. "To wish for a house in which to live, to desire a wife to grace it, or the agent necessary to manage it, or marketable values in addition; these are helpful steps to all kinds of industry, harmful to none—not even the possessors. Desire passes into evil when it becomes excessive of what others hold; when it would—were the power possessed—grasp itself to selfish gratification at another's cost" (Alfred Fothergill).

"In this day the commandment might read: 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's automobile, thy neighbor's ability to make a large salary; thy neighbor's honor; his trip abroad; thy neighbor's educational advantages; his good looks; his legacy—anything that is his neighbor's.'"

Gifts For The King

Will Be Offered In Canada Under Ancient Pledge

When the king visits Canada next summer he will be offered "two elk and two black beavers" as his right under an ancient pledge. Hon. Vincent Massey said in a speech at London.

Addressing a dinner of the City Livestock Club the Canadian high commissioner said the charter of the Hudson's Bay Company provided that "whenever the sovereign visits the territory of the governor and Company of Adventurers of England trading into Hudson's Bay" he shall be presented with two elk and two black beavers.

Wheat Consumption Within Canada

In 1868, when the population of Canada was 3,511,000, the apparent home consumption of wheat was 22,822,000 bushels. In 1937, with an estimated population of 11,120,000, the home consumption of wheat was placed at 105,904,000 bushels. The highest point reached was 139,487,000 bushels in 1930 when the population was estimated at 10,208,000.

England's first coffee house was opened in St. Michael's Alley, London, in 1652.

Not Room For All

But White House Will Accommodate Part Of Royal Entourage

King George and Queen Elizabeth will be house guests at the White House when they visit the United States next year after a visit to Canada.

Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt told her press conference that she and the President would entertain their royal visitors and such people in their party as they deemed necessary to have with them, but other arrangements would be made for some members of the royal entourage as she understood there would be 40 in the party and it would be impossible to accommodate all in the White House.

The King and Queen will be the first reigning royalty to be entertained overnight at the White House.

Tests Are Severe

For Young Men Entering Government Service In Tibet

Tests fully as severe as those recently given Fascist leaders in Italy are compulsory for all who want to enter the government service in Tibet, heretofore and shooting test by 14 young men is described by the British Mission to Lhasa in its diary, which has been made public in Simla, India. Musketry firing and arrow shooting on horseback were tests in the morning. A contest in arrow shooting, dismounted, was held in the afternoon. The contest was judged according to the distance of the arrow shot. Ceremonial scarves were presented as prizes.

The Real Trouble

Too Frequent Use Of Expression "O.K." Makes It Objectionable

An obscure columnist in an Eastern magazine has written a series of articles warning a woman reader deprecatingly to another woman as "the kind of person, you know, who says O.K." From which it would appear, says the Minneapolis Journal, that there are circles wherein O.K. is definitely out. There is not a thing wrong with the terse, typically American expression. In two syllables it puts finally upon an acceptance or an understanding. Like most Americanisms, the trouble with O.K. is that it is done to death.

Ordered To Take Rest

Doctors Say Canada's First Woman M.P. Has Tired Heart

Agnes Macphail, Canada's first woman M.P., revealed she has a "tired heart." The doctors who made the diagnosis, she told the United Press Women in the King Edward hotel in Toronto, have advised her to take a six-month rest.

"I need rest. I don't think there is anything fundamentally wrong with me," Miss Macphail said later.

Miss Macphail intimated she would take her rest when the House of Commons opens Jan. 12.

1939 Outlook

Preliminary work has begun on the preparation of the agricultural situation and outlook for 1939. This annual review of the position of Canadian agriculture is issued jointly by the Dominion Departments of Agriculture and Trade and Commerce at the beginning of each year, and is designed to assist farmers in planning their business operations.

Futile Phrases

"I didn't know it was loaded." "I thought there was room to pass." "I didn't see the trap coming." "I thought the water was shallow." "I forgot there was poison in one bottle." How many, many tragedies have been explained in these futile phrases, states the Ottawa Journal.

A golfer playing for only 10 cents on the first hole, and losing, then doubling the bet on each succeeding hole, and losing, would be out $26,214.50 in an 18-hole match.

Late afternoon arrived. Abstractly, as he worked, Hammond became aware that there was a great deal of loud conversation of a joyous type from upstream, where Olson seemed to find a new pocket—only that he might dig into another. Several of the more successful placer miners from more distant claims were there, poking about. Mrs. Joyce also was present; for that matter, it was seldom that Hammond looked toward Olson's claim without finding her somewhere in the picture. It was not a new strike, he knew that—there was no shouting and running about, no concerted movement of curious miners from other diggings. After a time Jack forgot the matter. Then the work day ended and his men made the clean-up. Hammond pounced the nuggets therefrom, walked a bit with Kay on the trail to the cottage, and finally cut away from her the night before. This was abandoned now and covered with logs. Jack had not been near it since the day McKenzie Joe went away. At last, sighting Kenning on the flat, he shouted:

"Anything good to-day?"

The geologist shook his head. Then as Hammond approached:

"Can't expect much yet. We're still twenty or twenty-five feet above where the stuff ought to be."

Hammond laughed.

"It's got to turn out."

"How can it help turning out?"

Kenning asked. "That river ran over here, somewhere. Unless," he added, "it deduced every rule of geology and swung under the bench land where I filed that worthless bunch of claims."

"You never pulled those out?"

Hammond suggested. "You said something about it when we signed up our agreement—about having to take out eight acres for that English syndicate."

Kenning nodded thoughtfully.

"I've got to be getting at that. I had a letter from them yesterday. I should have decided it over before. But oh, I don't know, when I get home at night—"

Hammond said nothing. Bruce, he knew, was seldom home, at least until late. His cabin rarely bore evidences of his presence when Jack went up on the hill, of evenings, to be with Kay and her mother. And the workmen talked daily of what Kenning had done over at Whoppee, at the roulette wheel. Jack gave it little attention; he felt that Bruce's winnings or losses could not be for sizeable amounts. At least, he said nothing about it, except now and then to explain his haggardness by good-naturedly cursing himself for being a fool about roulette.

"Know what I think I'd better do?" Kenning asked suddenly.

"That bench land's no good. Both of us know that. But I never take chances. I think I'll pull off a couple of stunts from this work here and put down a test pit. Just to be sure. Then, when it's done, I'll draw out that acreage and get rid of that English syndicate. Send 'em what they're looking for," he laughed abruptly. "Something we don't want."

Hammond laughed with him.

"Put down a test pit and then we'll be sure of it," he answered, and headed slowly back toward camp. But within sight of his cabin, he began to hurry. Mrs. Carewe, the Joyce maid, was there. Kay had sent her to bring him up the hill. Hammond finished the ascent of the trail on a run. He never before had received a summons like this.

Kay was in the living room, walking about, her hands clasped tightly before her. From a distance came the faint drone of an airplane.

"You're late," she said.

"I came as quickly as I could. I was at the upper workings. What's happened?"

"She gave a brittle laugh.

"Well," came abruptly. "I'm alone."

"Where's your mother?"

"That's it."

"You don't mean—"

"They're in that airplane, bound for Wrangell."

"She's gone with Olson?"

The girl laughed again, that queer, thin-drawn laugh.

"Yes, she's gone with Olson. He sold out this afternoon, to a bunch from up the creek. I tried to get hold of you—thought maybe you could argue with her. But it wouldn't have helped. She's wanted Olson and his nuggets ever since she saw him. So they're gone. Timmy's flying them to Wrangell."

Another month went by, blazing hot days, deepening into chill nights, with the dusk creeping over the valley more swiftly with each passing day. The bears had left the rock slides; berries were gone and leaves withered. The little town became more careful of sparks. Autumnal dryness was upon the North, growing more and more brief and menacing each day. With every cloud, miners turned their eyes skyward in search of evidences of the first snowstorm. But the clouds passed and the sun blazed on. Then, one day, shortly after the lunch hour, a workman came running down Leon Creek, shouting for Jack Hammond.

"Mr. Kenning wants you up there at the bench site," he exclaimed.

Hammond hesitated only long enough to summon Kay. Then with her breathless beside him, they hurried to the upper diggings. Kenning nervously impatient, awaiting them.

"Don't ask me why it happened," he said bluntly. "It's against everything I figured. It's just there—that's all."

He extended his clenched hands, opening them. Kay gave a half scream and moved forward. Hammond closed behind her. The man's palms were heaped with yellow gold; the wet sand of deep gravel still clung to the hunking nuggets.

"The gravel's cherted with them!" Kenning said, in a queer voice. Hammond stared at the yellow wealth.

"But how did it get there? Away over on this bench land—this has been solid earth for—"

"A thousand years!" answered Kenning. "But there's gravel beneath."

"Certainly. You can find gravel almost anywhere. But for gold to be in it—have you struck bedrock?"

"We're not anywhere near bedrock!" Kenning answered.

"You needn't shout," Kay suggested.

Bruce laughed. "Well, what are you shaking about?"

"I guess everybody's nervous," Hammond cut in. He wiped the back of a hand across his wet forehead.

"So we've found it—here. Where we least expected it." Again he asked, "Listen, Kenning, don't think I'm crazy. But are you sure? Are you really sure?"

The man nodded toward the gaping shaft.

"Get down there and shovel out a handful and see for yourself," he answered.

They were in Jack's cabin; Hammond was still shaken from the excitement caused by the painful of earth which he had taken from the gravel of the bench-land test pit. Kay walked about nervously. Kenning pawed through a tin box which he had brought down from his cabin; Hammond likewise had taken a bundle of papers from his hiding place under his bunk.

"It's a damn good thing we didn't take care of that English syndicate before we sank that test pit," Kenning said.

"Well," Kay announced, "if you had, I'd have been sunk."

"You?"

"After all the touting I did, to get Jack to take your advice."

"That would have been a hot one, now wouldn't it?" Jack Hammond hardly realized that he was speaking. He still could remember little that that pan of gravel as repeated washing slowly carried away the dross, at last to reveal the heavy sediment of golden globules. "If we'd signed away that land—and then this crooked England outfit had come along and made a ten-strike—"

"Not much danger of that," Kenning answered. "I told you in the beginning that they never intend to work it. Three years from now, we'll be able to buy back any land we sell them at our own price—if we want it."

"And the problem is," Kay broke in, "to find something they don't want."

"Looking for me, Mrs. Carewe?" she called. The maid of all work came nearer the cabin her. "Tea's about ready, Miss Kay," she announced.

"Thanks, I'll walk up with you," she turned, at the door. "Good night, Jack."

"Oh—good night, Kay—good night."

"Aren't you going to kiss me?" He dropped the bundle of papers that he might rush to her.

"That's quite an idiot of me," Suddenly his hands clenched.

"Gee, Kay! We've found it!"

"For all the good it does me."

"That's out." There was a drive to his voice. "I give the orders from now on."

She kissed him and patted him on the cheek.

"So that's what a few nuggets can do!"

"But he would not let her go. Impulsively he seized her, kissing her a dozen times, hugging her until she protested.

"That's it," he said huskily. "I'll give the orders. I'm boss—I'll tell you how to be happy. You can't imagine what this strike has done for me. Dearest!"

Laughing, she pushed him away.

"I've a fair idea," she answered, and calling good-night to the obedient geologist, went forth to join Mrs. Carewe. Hammond watched her until she was lost in the twist of the ascending trail.

"Kay's been swell about not wanting to marry me—just because I had money," he said brusquely, as he rejoined Kenning. "But I really didn't have much to offer her before—just those Leon Creek claims."

"You've got plenty now."

"And he would not let her go. Impulsively he seized her, kissing her a dozen times, hugging her until she protested.

"That's it," he said huskily. "I'll give the orders. I'm boss—I'll tell you how to be happy. You can't imagine what this strike has done for me. Dearest!"

TAKE THE LEAD OUT OF YOUR LEGS

Get Oxyen in Your Hand and You'll Get the Lead Out of Your Legs

People who suffer from the lead in their legs have been completely out of their minds just as surely as they are slowly smothered by their blood vessels and arteries.

Oxyen is the only blood purifier in the world of your system. Without enough oxygenating oxygen, your kidneys, liver, and lungs, fail, and finally, your nerves are paralyzed. Oxyen is the only blood purifier in the world of your system.

"Don't call 'em friends. They're swine, the whole gang of them. I'd get mixed into it. I'll keep my eye and send them something."

"There isn't much left."

Kenning laughed.

"Nothing except where Joe was working. If they want a worthless tract, that's it."

Treating Neck Fractures

Method Of Denver Physician More Comfortable For Patient

A new method of healing broken necks by boring holes in the skull and attaching wires through them to pull the head up was described before the Southern Medical Association.

The device, demonstrated by Dr. Ralph M. Stuck, of Denver, Colo., is designed to pull apart the broken fragments of the backbone until they have time to heal. It makes the wearing of a plaster collar unnecessary until late in the mending process.

In applying it to the victim of an automobile or other accident the young Denver physician bores two holes in the skull just back of the normal hairline, inserts a retracting device or clamp, and attaches to it wires which exert an upward pull of from five to thirty pounds by means of weights attached to the ends.

This method has resulted in a large improvement in the number of survivors from neck fractures and is more comfortable for the patient since it allows him to move about in bed, Dr. Stuck said.

He asserted many lives could be saved and many serious injuries could be avoided if accident speculators were not too enthusiastic in moving a victim. When a back injury is suspected the injured person should be lifted carefully by four persons, two of whom lift him by the shoulders while two others lift the head and feet while stretching him steadily and firmly. This method avoids additional injury to the spinal cord, he explained.

Freight By Aircraft

Soviet Russia Is Now Loading Canada In Tonnage

Soviet Russia has replaced Canada as the leading country in carrying of freight by aircraft. It was disclosed in a report on civil aviation in the Dominion, issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

At one time, more freight was carried by aircraft in Canada than in any other country, but in 1937 tonnage carried by Canadian aircraft totaled 26,279.156 pounds, compared with 70,000,000 pounds for the Soviet.

Freight traffic in Canada has increased "very rapidly" during the last four years, the report said. The total for 1937 was only 2,772,467 pounds. In the next two years the quantity about doubled and in 1934 it increased to 14,441,179 pounds.

In 1935, freight carried by air in Canada jumped to 17,615,910 pounds. In 1936 it rose to 25,387,719 and in 1937 to 26,279,156 pounds.

Civilization's greatest handicap has always been mankind's inability to reject any fool idea that is preached long enough.

The trout and the mandarin, says Mr. Pickering, lived a peaceful life side by side, until the little pintail arrived.

Medical Care Provided

The New York World's Fair is making unusual preparations for the medical care of visitors in view of the fact that actuarial figures indicate that of the 60,000,000 people expected to attend, some 40,000 will require medical aid in the six months after the opening on April 30. Most of these will be minor cases, but the doctors and nurses will be ready for anything.

The Latest Hobby

Collecting Dolls Has Been Added To Buttons And Stamps

Dolls are the American collector's No. 1 fad this year.

That's the word from O. C. Lightner, director of the current annual Chicago Antique Exposition, and Hobby Show with dealers and collectors from New York to California to sell, swap, show—and brag.

A tour through the 300 exhibits in the vast outcropping of collector-mania showed that Americans are hunting down mustache cups, buttons worn by famous people, old dinner bells—in fact, just about everything with a touch of age or history that isn't nailed down.

Collectors are favoring dolls in native foreign costume, and in the collection of Yvonne Sohn of Chicago, there is a little French aristocrat in the dress of a marchioness who managed to keep her blouse head during the French revolution.

Not all the doll collectors are women, for John Conover of Ossining, N.Y., has two dolls made in 1740, but men tend like dolls made on the scale of the wood cigar store American Indian.

Indian relics of all kinds have their devotees. Early American china and glass continue as popular collectors' items—and some of it is getting up in the money. Add to this colorful glass paper weights, old sheet music, harness buttons, as newcomers in fads.

The answer to "button, button, who got the button?" can probably be found with Mrs. K. L. Brown of Kansas City, who has 31,000 of them.

As for the stamp collectors, they're a colony in themselves.

Origin Not Known

Sweet Potato Apparently A Flowering Plant Early In Its History

The sweet potato is used in making glue for postage stamps. Mucilage, ideally suited for stamps, is produced from starch contained in the tuber.

The origin of the sweet potato is not known with certainty, but it is spoken of in the Chinese Encyclopedia of Agriculture, written long before Columbus crossed the Atlantic. The Great Admiral, however, discovered the sweet potato growing in the new world, and introduced it into southern Europe.

The sweet potato is relation of the white potato, and is among the most important food crops in the United States, ranking 7th place.

Sweet potatoes weighing as big as 40 pounds are grown in the island of New Guinea, in the South Seas.

In Szechwan, China, sweet potatoes are so cheap they are known as "beggars' food," and impoverished individuals are nicknamed "sweet potato eaters."

A temple of the sweet potato formerly was to be found in Japan; offerings were made to the plant god every spring and autumn.

The sweet potato was apparently a flowering plant early in its history, and it still blooms in the tropics. It doubtless had difficulty keeping alive through flowers and seeds turned to storing food at its roots from these food sources for the next crop; in the course of its evolution, flowers and seeds were abandoned.

REFUNDING ALBERTA'S DEBT

It seems to be a fact that the Alberta government is exploring possibilities to refund Alberta's debts and restoring the credit of this province. The total debt is about $160 millions, and the original requirements of debt service was about $7 millions annually. This matter was substantially cut when the interest rate on Alberta bonds was arbitrarily reduced.

It is, of course, possible to refund Alberta's public debt. But there is likely to be a considerable amount of profiteering on the part of those who bought bonds at depressed values if anything like the face value is to be approached in the repayment plan.

There is almost certain to be substantial injustices in any refunding plan, if, as and when such a step is taken.—Brooks Bulletin.

NEWS FROM EDMONTON

(T. B. Windross)

Edmonton, Dec. 5. — Two of the best reasons for the sudden and discreet deaths of various insurgent movements in the Alberta legislature and in the cabinet during the past three years, and particularly in the past year, were presented eloquently to those who were able to dig them out of a mass of figures last week.

They were in the public accounts of the province for the year ending last March 31st. And among other things—among a welter of evidence of other extravagances—a papered computation to show these things:

1. Entirely apart from their regular indemnities of $2,000 each and their special indemnities last year, private members of the legislature drew a total of $9,348 for themselves in "subsistence allowances," which were special cash grants made to them for sitting on committees and boards created by the members themselves.

2. Cabinet ministers paid themselves, in addition to their regular salaries of $5,500 in the case of the premier and $6,000 each in the case of other ministers, and in addition to their sessional indemnities, a total of $8,156 in travelling expenses.

Never before in Alberta's history have private members of the legislature been so generous to themselves at the public trough, never before has a government in power been so generous in appointing so many backbenchers to so many "special committees" or "boards," at rates ranging between $8 and $12 per day for each man (or woman), in addition to the regular allowance given to legislators.

The total paid to the backbenchers on various committees during the fiscal year 1932-1933, which was the first full year of the Aherbhart government, totalled just $1,506. The year before, 1931-32, part of which was under the administration of the U.F.A. government and the rest under the Aherbhart government in those happy days before any Social Credit members began to rebel so seriously that concessions had to be sought for them, was just $58.

The cabinet ministers' total of travelling expenses created no new record; the yearly total reached its high mark under the present administration in the previous fiscal year, with its total then of $9,318. The chief significance in those high totals lies in the lack of accomplishments to show for them except if the strictly political and party field, and the reports usually made by ministers when they have returned to the capital: "Nothing to say; the trip was just government business."

Premier Aherbhart and Provincial Treasurer Low are due back in Edmonton this week after another joyful trip east. The premier visited his

The SNAPSHOT GUILD
SYMBOLS OF SUMMER

"The summer comes with flower and bee."

THE beauty of flowers is an attraction and a challenge to every camera owner. Frankly, good flower pictures are not easy to take and for that reason success brings more than ordinary satisfaction to the amateur photographer.

Proper lighting, a large image and patient work with the camera are the essentials of flower photography. The best camera to use is one with a long-extension bellows, enabling one to focus close to the flower, and having a ground glass focusing screen on which you can see the image before mapping the shutter.

But, if you haven't such a camera, good work may be done with ordinary folding or box cameras, provided a portrait attachment is used to obtain a large image. This supplementary lens, which comes with a table of focusing distances, makes it possible to work within arm's length of the subject. Always use a tape measure to determine exactly the specified distance between lens and flower. Panchromatic film gives the best rendering of the tone contrasts among the colors.

Player pictures need to be vividly sharp; hence, a small lens opening should usually be used—f16 or f22—or the smallest stop on box cameras, and the camera should be on a tripod or held securely with a camera clamp. The exposure should be from 1/4 to one second.

Wind is a problem, of course. At such close distances movement of the subject makes more difference. It is worth while to wait for a moment when the blossom is motionless. If you find the wind too blowsy, devise a wind-breaker of some sort. Hazy days, or when the sun is shining under light clouds, makes the ideal time for flower pictures. Direct bright sunshine is not desirable, but if you can't wait for better conditions, give your subject the protection of a cheesecloth screen. Better results are obtained in the early morning or late afternoon when the light is less harsh and comes from the side. This is especially true for cup-shaped flowers. Nearby foliage, or other blossoms not wanted, may be tied back with string or cut away. A piece of stiff gray cardboard placed behind the flower often is a better background than the natural one.

Sometimes, if you are patient enough to wait, a roving bee will enter the challenge of your flower. Click! Your patience is rewarded with a picture that is a perfect symbol of summertime.

Photography, Time and Sentiment

"Backward, turn backward, O Time, in your flight!"

THIS is an address to camera-owning parents to remind them of a few facts relative to the sentimental value of photography and the passage of time. Self evident though they may be, these facts are too often forgotten.

The first is that in the case of parents the most treasured of all photographs are those of their children. When the children grow up, photographic records of how they looked as children become with the years more and more precious. Any doubt about that?

Fact number two is that parents who are camera owners have the means of obtaining pictures of their children at any time throughout those childhood years.

The third and most important is that since Time is not a motion picture reel that can be repeated or turned back to a given scene, too many parents let Time slip by without taking the pictures that will make the record of their children's constantly changing appearance.

Billie, aged ten, is quite a different looking person from the one he was at eight, six, four and two. If years are allowed to pass without pictures being taken of him, memories of how he looked at different ages survive only vaguely. Remember that mental pictures fade and perish but images on photographic paper are

CALGARY COMMUNIST

Calgary voters elected an avowed Communist, Pat Lenihan, as a member of the city council at the regular municipal election.

This extraordinary "about face" on the part of staid, conservative Calgary, has aroused great curiosity throughout Alberta and Canada. It is even suspected that Stalin, dictator of Soviet Russia, is mildly interested and had a notion to send a congratulatory telegram to Mr. Lenihan.

A city that can elect an R. B. Bennett, Conservative, and Pat Lenihan, Communist, to hold offices at the same time, is a metropolitan centre of broadminded electors—or else they are saturated with an insatiable curiosity.—Brooks Bulletin.

Patient: "Has it come to the worst, Doctor?"

Doctor: "Not yet. I'll mail the bill tomorrow."

"Bridget, didn't I hear you quarrelling with the milkman this morning?"

"Ye did not, ma'am. I enquired about a milkmaid at the dairy."

"Yes, and —"

"Say I, 'how's the milkmaid?' an' he got in a temper an' said, 'That's a thrade secret!'"

"Norah," said Mrs. Sharpface from the top of the stairs, "tell that man who is ringing the doorbell that I am not receiving today."

The servant went to the door and said something to the man. Then she stepped into the hall and called upstairs: "I told him you were not receiving today, ma'am, but he says he isn't delivering—he's collecting."

"So your name is George Washington?" the old lady asked the small colored boy.

"Yesum."

"And you try to be exactly like him, or as nearly as possible?"

"Lak who?"

"Why, like George Washington."

"Ah, kaint he'p bein' lak Jawg Washington, 'cause dat's who ah is."

A CALEDONIAN TRICK

The following item is copied from Wednesday's Lethbridge Herald:

"The members of the Bellevue branch of the Caledonian Society attended dinner service at the Bellevue United church on Sunday evening in large numbers. Rev. Wood, of Hillcrest, the chaplain of the Caledonian society, was in charge of the service."

It's a splendid idea to get the Scotch folk out to church—either offer a dinner or no collection.

Bride: "Won't oos 'tittle unpaie dumpsie kiss oos 'tittle ootsie woot-ale?"

Two Golden Bears in next berth (somewhere between Los Angeles and home): "Won't those damned foreigners ever shut up?"

"Do you believe ignorance is bliss?" asked a high school boy of a girl entering the Blairmore library.

"I dunno," she replied, "but you look as if you are happy."

"Sometimes," said the mistress, "it will be necessary for you to help the butler upstairs."

"I understand, madam," replied the maid; "when he's had one too many."—Ex.

The Young People's Society of Central United church, Blairmore, held a social evening in the church auditorium on Thursday last, when the guest speaker, Rev. R. Upton, of Bellevue, gave an interesting talk on some of his experiences while enroute to England some time ago. A good programme was enjoyed. After the meeting, refreshments were served.

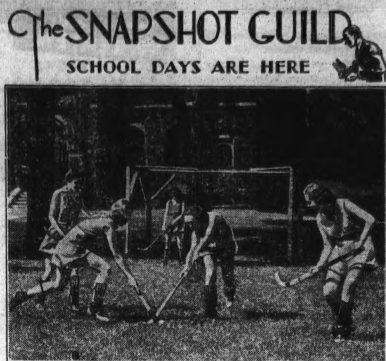

The teacher was explaining to the class the meaning of the word "recupente."

"Now, Tommy," she said to a small boy, "when your father has worked hard all day, he is tired and worn out, isn't he?"

"Yes, Miss."

"Then, when night comes, and his work is over for the day, what does he do?"

"That's what mother wants to know!"

The many school activities offer countless opportunities for snapping pictures that you will enjoy in years to come.

If there was ever a snapshotter's paradise, it's school for those who attend it. It may be a one-room school or it may be a great university. Wherever, whatever it may be, it's crammed with unbeatable picture possibilities.

Yet we might as well face the fact of the matter—few snapshotters make the most of school's snap-shooting opportunities.

Perhaps they are dazzled by the very wealth of the material at hand. More likely, they assume that somebody else is going to take the pictures. And that's a fatal mistake. For nobody else can see things as you see them. And it's what you see that means most to you—and to the folks at home, now or years from now.

The question, then, is how to make the most of school's picture possibilities. A little planning will do the trick.

First, about the right camera for school. Any camera will do, providing it is clean and in good order and uses a size of film that is easily available anywhere. If yours has a fast lens and a fast shutter, you'll have an advantage in taking shots at sporting events, but such a camera is not at all essential. With a little care you can make even the simplest box camera turn out entirely satisfactory pictures.

Then, how can snapshotting be planned? All of it, of course, cannot be planned, but many of the most important shots can be. Why not work out a scenario, Hollywood fashion?

First of all, whether school's just around the corner or a thousand miles away, you'll want a few good shots of home. Then a view or two taken on the way to school. Maybe those views seem commonplace now, but wait a few years.

At school, of course, there are the obvious shots of the buildings, the grounds, new classmates, teachers, old friends, sports, picnics, class ceremonies, and so on. It's a good idea to take them so as to form a kind of continued story. Then, when they are mounted in your album, the pictorial story will flow along evenly.

A really good collection of school pictures is hard to find, as any school year-book editor will tell you. Yet there's nothing much easier to take; and few snapshots increase in value, year after year, as surely as those taken at school. John van Guilder

LETHBRIDGE HERALD

PRAISES RAILWAY

Superintendent W. H. Rutherford, and his officers and employees of the Lethbridge, Alberta, division, were recently given high editorial praise by the Lethbridge Herald.

Said The Herald: "When we're passing out the bouquets these days, don't forget the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway on the Lethbridge division."

"This month, without the blare of trumpets, the company has handled on the Lethbridge division well over 10,000,000 bushels of wheat. In two months since August 1 the company handled more than 18,000,000 bushels. That's as much as South Alberta produced last year."

"It's a fine service record and one that South Alberta farmers will not forget."

Lethbridge is in exclusive territory, where most cordial relations between the company and the people whom it serves have always existed despite the lack of the "spur-of-competition," of which so much is heard nowadays.

COULD USE RONALD

IF NO REHABILITATION

Great interest has been aroused in this district by the reports that the Redcliff-Ronlance irrigation scheme may be settled by Jewish refugees.

According to informed parties, the scheme, still in the first stages, will settle two thousand Jewish families on the land and the improvements and new works necessary will be financed by money raised privately in Canada. The refugees will also be supported until such times as the land is in condition. There is to be no cost to the governments whatsoever.

Redcliff business men have hoped for some time that the scheme would be completed as a rehabilitation number and the apathy of the federal and provincial governments has been strongly criticized. If the original scheme of rehabilitation is not to be considered, it is hoped that the federal government will give every consideration to the Jewish representations.—Redcliff Review.

Another Youth Problem

A good deal is heard about the plight of the jobless youth of the country but not so much is said about the misfortunes of the many young men who are pitchforked into employment for which they are not fitted, either by inclination or education, or both and who, as a result, either presently find themselves out of work or else out a miserable existence on an inadequate wage with little hope of improving their lot except after a lengthy period of painful trial and error.

The existence of a substantial number of these square pegs in round holes in the larger towns and cities, many of them originating from the farms and small villages, cannot but arouse the sympathy of the spectator and curiosity as to the underlying causes of this condition.

"Well, he has a job anyway and look at the thousands who are unable to get any kind of work" is apt to be the reaction of some of the unemployed and of some who are successful in their chosen vocation, but who do not realize that the situation represents a problem of economic and human waste which requires solution just as much as the problem of unemployment itself.

For it cannot be gainsaid that the young man who is struggling to make a living in employment which is incompatible and for which he has little or no aptitude, is likely sooner or later to become imbued with a spirit of frustration when he realizes, perhaps after several of the best years of his life, that he is faced with the alternative of starting afresh at the bottom in some other vocation or of remaining where he is with all prospects of advancement beyond the mediocre either extremely remote or entirely absent. In other words the number of years that he has spent in fruitless effort have represented a waste not only for himself but for the industry in which he is engaged.

Shortage Of Skilled Labor In Sight

There are many causes responsible for this condition, not the least of which is the great depression which has brought about a stalemate from which industry has not yet recovered. In the earlier stages of the depression large numbers of men were discharged. Some of the experienced men are now beyond working age and others, somewhat younger, have not yet been able to get back into their former vocations.

While some industrial firms have, in the meantime, filled up gaps caused by death or the necessity to take on additional help with former experienced employees, others have taken on younger and inexperienced men at lower wages on the assumption that they were economizing. Included in this group are many young men who have taken courses in the technical schools and who, presumably, therefore, were equipped to fill the vacancies as well as many others who have had little or no training. For every vacant job there has been an overwhelming rush of applicants and, under the circumstances it is not surprising that there are a good many of these square pegs in round holes.

Moreover, executives have found by experience that too often the products of these technical schools are not much better equipped for practical industrial conditions than some who have had little or no training and as a result the lad who appears in the workshop as a graduate finds that he must start practically from scratch or try to get work in some other branch of industry.

As a result heads of industrial concerns are already visualizing a time in the not far distant future when there will actually be a shortage of skilled workers, despite the large number of unemployed and the not inconsiderable number of youths who are being turned out of institutions devoted to training students in the technical arts and crafts.

Close Relations Needed

The situation appears to warrant investigation into the possibility of a closer tie-up between the technical institutions and industry, possibly the development of some system under which the student will spend a part of his time in the school and a part of his time in the workshop, not the workshop at the school but in the factory or the garage where he will meet practical everyday problems at first hand; in fact, a modern development of the old apprenticeship system.

It is along these lines that the Danes are solving this problem with considerable success. Under their apprenticeship law, enacted in 1921 and extended in 1937, provision is made for apprenticeships of four to five years, the administration of which is carried out by trades committees and apprentices councils, on both of which there is equal representation of employers and employees.

In every case of apprenticeship there must be a contract between master and apprentice, recognized by the public authorities. In this contract the duration of the apprenticeship, including provision for a six-month probationary period, and the wages to be paid must be stated. During his apprenticeship the apprentice must, at his employer's expense, attend the classes in technical as well as cultural training at a local technical school recognized by the Minister of Trade.

Industry of today is complicated by the very rapid strides being made in the fields of technology and science. The processes and operations of today are obsolete by tomorrow and this condition necessitates a very close and intimate relationship between education and industry itself.

The Prime Of Usefulness

Average Worker At Forty Is Valuable To His Employer

The idea that men and women who have reached the age of 40 are no longer assets in industry is scoffed at by the American Legion re-employment director, states the Detroit Free Press.

And he cites studies made by the Labor Department, the American Association of Manufacturers and university researchers to show that because of his maturity and greater stability and sense of responsibility, an average worker at 40 years of age is just reaching the prime of his usefulness.

Common sense and industrial experience reach the same conclusion.

A job in which physical brawn and stamina alone are required naturally can be better done by men who have not passed the peak of their physical strength. And yet even here no arbitrary age limit can be set. A man at 60 who has taken care of himself, will be able to stand the physical test better than a man of 40, who has dissipated his strength in riotous living.

There are many jobs in industry, though, where physical strength is a secondary consideration. And it is in these jobs that employers have discovered that men and women over 40 are as valuable as, if not more valuable than, younger persons.

At the age of 40 men and women, if they are worth anything at all, usually have acquired family responsibilities. They are likely, therefore, to be less radical and more loyal. They have experience and maturity of judgment, which come only with years. They cannot be replaced by boys and girls without temporary loss to their employers.

All this is so well known to business men and industrialists that it is rather surprising that it should be felt necessary, at this late date, to tell the country that "useful life begins at 40."

Civil Aviation In Canada

Pilots Now Fly More Than Ten Million Miles A Year

Civil aviation in Canada, a $5,000,000 investment, is making tremendous progress. Its pilots now fly more than 10,000,000 miles a year—a distance equivalent to 400 times around the world at the equator.

A report prepared by the Dominion bureau of statistics disclosed since 1933, aircraft mileage for civil pilots has more than doubled and total freight and express carried has jumped six-fold.

In 1933 the mileage was 4,100,000 and last year 10,700,000. Freight and express carried in 1933 amounted to 4,200,000 pounds and this increased to 26,200,000 in 1937.

Licensed civil airports jumped from 90 in 1933 to 158 last year; licensed civil aircraft showed an increase from 345 in the mid-depression year to 604 in 1937.

Final figures for 1937 indicated there were 320 commercial pilots in the Dominion, 129 limited commercial pilots, 73 transport pilots, 938 private pilots and 595 air engineers.

A breakdown of the total investment in civil aviation disclosed that there was $3,291,000 invested in aircraft last year, $31,039,000 in organization expenditures, $811,000 in land and buildings, $457,000 in tools and equipment and $44,000 in furniture and office appliance.

There were 159,829 passengers carried by civil aviation planes with Ontario leading the provinces in origin of traffic with 63,198 passengers. Quebec was second with 30,698 and Saskatchewan third with 14,366.

The Queen Mother

Will Supervise Care Of Young Princess During Absence Of King And Queen

The visit of the King and Queen to America next year will bring Queen Mary from her self-imposed semi-retirement to supervise the care of their two daughters.

Princess Elizabeth, heir to the throne, and her sister, Princess Margaret Rose, will be under the official supervision of the queen mother but will be directly cared for by their governess, Miss Joan Crawford. They will follow their normal school routine, living at Buckingham Palace.

It is expected, however, that Queen Mary's visits to Buckingham Palace will be much more frequent while the children will go daily to Marlborough House to visit their grandmother. She will resume her former practice of taking them for afternoon visits to places of public interest, such as the zoo, art galleries and museums.

Buckingham Palace sources said that the two young princesses have accepted the trip of their parents philosophically, without showing chagrin because they cannot go too

Grand Championships

Western Winners Are Named In Various Classes

Nels Linden of Gwynne, Alta., not only won the National Wheat Championship at the 1938 Royal Winter Fair, but also took the barley Grand Championship. He won the wheat crown with a sample of Reward wheat, a hard red spring variety originated by the Cereal Division, Dominion Experimental Farms. It weighed 69 pounds to the bushel. The Grand Championship barley was a sample of the Trebil variety.

Nels Linden went to Alberta from Minnesota over 20 years ago and farms about 1,000 acres at Gwynne, near Wetaskiwin. He has been a member of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association for several years.

The reserve championship for wheat at the Royal went to Cecil Trowell of Saltcoats, Sask., for his sample of Reward. He, too, is a member of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association.

The 1937 National Wheat Championship at the Royal Winter Fair, went to James Sebastian of Wembley, Alberta, a member of the Canadian Boys' and Girls' Farm Clubs. This year his sample of Reward was placed fourth. W. Justyn Rigby, Wembley, Alberta, was awarded the Grand Championship for oats. He showed a sample of the Victory variety. The championship for peas went to Douglas Gibson, Leduc, B.C., for alfalfa seed to A. E. Rusk, White Fox, Sask.; for potatoes to George Elchuk, Muriel, Ont. and for beans to G. F. Hilliard, Monarch, Alberta.

A Long Highway

Dream Of 12,900-Mile Road From Alaska To South America

A highway starting in the northern snows of Alaska and ending in the southern snows of Patagonia is gradually emerging from the dream stage. A long 12,900 miles of road, if the dream comes true, automobiles some day may go from Canada and the United States to the 20 republics of Latin America.

A report to the Pan-American Conference will show that great progress has been made since the last conference at Montevideo five years ago. Great tracts of the highway are in operation. You can drive from a point considerably north in Canada through the United States, through Mexico City toward Guatemala. Canada recently has taken a direct interest in travel facilities between the Americas and Premier Paulino G. de la Cruz has been in Washington recently about the proposed highway south from Alaska through British Columbia.

Canadian Macaroni

Exports From Canada To The United Kingdom Are Increasing

The quality of Canadian macaroni on the British market brings prestige to the Dominion, states the Canadian Trade Commissioner at Bristol, England. Due to its popularity, there are enquiries from time to time from distributors of food products who wish to act as direct agent of a Canadian manufacturer. For the 12 months ended March, 1938, exports of macaroni from Canada to the United Kingdom amounted to 5,592,271 pounds, valued at $212,245. For the previous twelve months, the amount was 4,766,077 pounds, valued at $281,195.

BRITAIN PLANS TO PLACE NATION ON A WAR BASIS

London.—The British government is laying plans to place the whole industrial life of the nation on a war basis a few hours after an outbreak of hostilities.

The general idea of the plan were learned after Sir John Anderson, lord privy seal, outlined to the House of Commons a new policy to build up civil defences. He announced a nationwide voluntary drive for civilian defence and plans for a quick national register on a compulsory basis in wartime.

The whole idea of the scheme is to draft a plan whereby the industrial life of the nation may be switched over to a wartime basis with a minimum of interruption and delay. It may include moving vital industrial plants from dangerous areas of the country to protect them from bombers. This might involve some form of compulsion over men and women workers to follow the plans but it is understood the government hopes it can bring capital and labor together without the necessity of compulsion.

Sir John Anderson, the cabinet minister responsible for civilian defence, told the House, of Commons 20,000,000 handbooks would be sent to householders giving details of services open to volunteers, outlined other details of a broad voluntary project, and announced the plans for a shift to compulsory national war-time registration which he said "may become necessary."

Sir John disclosed machinery is being set up to effect compulsory civilian mobilization within three weeks in case of war and said a voluntary register by localities would be combined in peacetime with measures "for insuring that all who wish to serve their country have the means of knowing how their services can best be utilized."

The handbooks, the first step, will give material on services like police, air raids precaution, nursing and the regular and reserve armed forces. They are expected to be in the hands of every householder by mid-January.

The second step would be a compilation of a "full list of all key occupations which if this country has to mobilize for defence, would become so essential to war effort of the nation that persons above a certain age who are engaged in them could not be spared for any other form of national service."

He announced also an intensive recruiting campaign beginning the middle of January, steps to build the national service organization to help individuals decide which places they would fill best in the defence scheme, a general scheme of preliminary instruction in the principles of civilian defence and the expediting of arrangements for training volunteers.

Sir John added that it will become a "part of the ordinary duties of citizenship to know the elements of aid and defence and how the problems of civilian defence may react on the normal activities of the community."

It was predicted new defence measures would include building important factories in the "distressed areas" as an aid in wiping them out. He said the labor ministry would bring into consultation representatives of both employers and workers in co-ordinating the country's services for defence.

"We proposed further," Sir John stated, "that the people who volunteer for certain classes of civilian service should be obligated to undertake a more definite invitation of a contractual nature than has been expected hitherto."

"Our aim is to enroll by these means early in the new year a sufficient number of recruits to bring the number of volunteers up to the estimated requirements of each of the various services. We hope also to obtain an adequate number of reserves for each civilian service."

Youth Conference

Toronto.—The Canadian Youth Congress announced it will call a conference of youth and adult leaders in Ottawa to present to the Dominion government a "positive plan" for a national youth administration. Date for the meeting was not set.

Cincinnati.—F. W. Elven, editor of The Cincinnati Free Press, German language newspaper, who recently was named by the German government to receive its second class eagle award, said he had refused to accept the citation.

Opening Of Parliament

January 12th Is The Date Chosen For Next Session

Ottawa.—Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced the government had chosen January 12 for opening the next session of parliament.

This date, he said at a press conference following a cabinet meeting, had been considered most suitable having regard to convenience of members coming from a long distance, and to the desire of the government to have its legislative program ready.

In selecting the second Thursday in January for the formal opening the government has given parliament a bare four months to complete its work before arrival in Canada of King George and Queen Elizabeth next May 15.

In view of the fact 1939 is expected to be a general election year with a consequent heavy legislative program, the likelihood of prolonged debate, the objective of prorogation before the visit of their Majesties would seem difficult of attainment observers believe.

If prorogation is impossible within four months there will be an adjournment to permit members and ministers to be in their own ridings for the Royal tour.

First business of the session, once the speech from the throne has been disposed of, will be consideration of the new Canada-United States trade agreement which, although it becomes effective provisionally next January 1, must be ratified by parliament.

Mr. Mackenzie King has made no recent observation on the likely time for the next general election but his government will have been four years in office by next October and the general rule has been to go to the country after four years.

Taxation In Canada

Burden Is Unbearably Heavy, Says Hon. T. A. Crerar

Montreal.—Taxation in Canada is "unbearably heavy," Hon. T. A. Crerar, minister of natural resources, told the chamber of mines, a division of Montreal's board of trade. He said governments have been unwise at times "but in future we should chart our course in sensible fashion so far as expenditure of money is concerned."

Mr. Crerar was cheered by the 600 guests present at the dinner when he said: "We must take stock of our expenditures. We must make improvements in a way that will add to the productive wealth of the country and leave to later years the other things that seem to be necessary in a modern civilization."

The federal minister said Canada's heavy taxation was due largely to the heavy services we carry and for only 11,000,000 people. He pointed out the progress of modernization in Canada and said he expected it to make an even greater contribution to the national economy of the country.

"Five years ago we didn't, but now we know enough to realize Canada is blessed with minerals as few other countries are blessed," he said. "The sheet anchor we have in our mineral deposits is the reason we haven't slipped back during the United States depression."

Demand Release Of Ships

Greek Vessels Held By Insurgents Carried Wheat For Britain

London.—The British government demanded the immediate release of two Greek ships seized by Spanish insurgents forces Nov. 23 and 24. Richard Butler, under-secretary for foreign affairs, announced in the House of Commons.

The ships were carrying cargoes of wheat purchased by the British government in Roumania. They were taken to Palma Bay, Mallorca, Mr. Butler said, and instructions were wired to the British agent at Burgos that he demand immediate release of the ships.

Ice Cream Goes North

Edmonton.—The southbound train north around Goldfields Bank, it seems, have a liking for ice cream even in winter time. Pilot Harry Winnily of Canadian Airways carried five gallons of the delicacy aboard his plane when he took off from here for the mining settlement located on the eastern shore of Lake Athabasca.

Implement Exports Down

Ottawa.—The Dominion bureau of statistics reported Canada's export of farm implements and machinery in October totalled $340,196, compared with $439,747 in September and $671,632 in October, 1938. Argentina was the leading purchaser with $140,004 worth followed by the United Kingdom with $57,927 and the United States $45,676.

Yangtze River Closed

Only Japanese Shipping Allowed To Use China's Trade Artery

Shanghai.—Japan's armed forces have served notice the great Yangtze river, China's main trade artery, would remain closed to all but Japanese shipping until China is conquered and reconstructed under Japanese control.

A joint army and navy communiqué indicated protests of foreign powers, chiefly Great Britain, United States and France, against the closing of the river to their commerce, would be unavailing.

The fighting services said this situation would be continued until the government of General Chiang Kai-shek is destroyed and peace and order restored in China in accordance with Japan's plan for the new order in the Far East.

MARKET MUST BE RESTORED FOR WESTERN WHEAT

Ottawa.—"I see only one possible solution to make living tolerable on the prairies," Dr. Jacob Viner, University of Chicago economist, told the Dominion-provincial relations commission.

"There must be a serious attempt by Canada to blast a place for wheat in the markets of the world by tariff concessions and trade agreements."

"Failing that," continued the pessimistic professor, "the population of western Canada will be destroyed by increasing malnutrition, vanishing income and falling hope. The real problem is how can Canada restore markets for prairie wheat? There is no obvious reasonable prospect for the continued support of 2,500,000 of prairie population unless wheat is made respectable again on the markets of the world."

Professor Viner's entire argument was devoted to the thesis that the protective—not the revenue-producing sections of the tariff—but the prohibitory protective tariffs, impose an extra burden of $47,000,000 each year on the prairie provinces in increased living cost. Simultaneously, the destruction of wheat markets by self-sufficient policies of other nations, coupled with retaliatory tariffs have destroyed prairie dwellers' possibility of existence.

Professor Viner, born in Canada and a graduate of McGill University, said he felt this was a "very important issue" for Canada. Though he had been away for several years he was still deeply interested in the nation's problems.

"I can see only one possible solution for the prairies, tolerable for them, and reasonable for Canada as a whole. That is, a serious attempt to blast a place for Canadian wheat in world negotiations."

Otherwise, subsidies and bonuses were the only way of helping the west with its problems, and these were not a real solution.

"After all, grinding poverty is no good for such a large section of the Canadian population," he said.

"The important question is how Canada can plan intelligently to solve the wheat problem. Wheat must again be made a respectable commodity."

"A rather gloomy picture," commented Commissioner McKay.

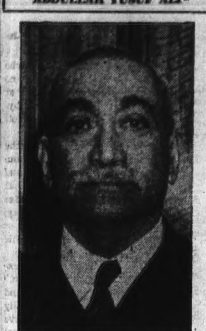

"Perhaps we should say very frankly 'yes,'" Professor Viner replied. "On its strictly economic aspects I do not see how the federal government can meet the problem by subsidies and the like, for there is no unlimited wealth in Canada to provide such revenue. The west must sell more wheat, earn a normal living and thus be able to pay its debts."

DUKE AND DUCHESS OF ATHOLL

The Duchess of Atholl has resigned from her seat in the House of Commons to force a by-election at which she will again be a candidate. Because of her criticism of Premier Chamberlain's policy, her local constituency voted that they would not support her in the next election. The Duke of Atholl, chairman of the local Conservative organization, resigned when the vote was passed.

Problem Becoming Serious

Care Of Non-Residents And Migrants Is To Be Studied

Ottawa.—Appointment of a national committee to study the problem of caring for non-residents and migrants throughout Canada was decided upon by the board of governors of the Canadian Welfare Council.

The governors decided to concentrate on the problem at once as a result of representations of agencies from coast to coast regarding persons unable to qualify for relief under local regulations.

"Reports before the council indicate that not only is the problem assuming very serious aspects in practically all parts of the country but that in several centres the problem of the non-resident family is becoming one of comparably critical proportions," a statement said.

Tentative plans were outlined for a possible national conference under the council's auspices in Ottawa during 1939 as soon as possible after the report of the royal commission on Dominion-provincial relations is made public.

New President

Hacha Now Head Of The Czechoslovak Republic

Prague.—Dr. Emil Hacha, formerly head of the supreme court administrator, was elected third president of Czechoslovakia by the national assembly. Being the only candidate, his election was mere formality.

The new chief of state will be known as the "president of the Czechoslovak republic," a phrase which officially hypheates the name of the nation to indicate equality of Czechs and Slovaks.

Rudolf Beran, a deputy and agrarian party leader who was former President Eduard Benes' opponent for 20 years, will be the new premier. He is expected to pursue a completely pro-German course.

Relief For Refugees

New York.—In one of the most remarkable responses ever made to appeals for the aid of a people in need, American Christians and Jews in a little more than two weeks showed at least $2,000,000 on agencies for relief of German refugees.

Valuable Shrub

Courtenay, B.C.—Devil's club, a thorny shrub found in the coast district of British Columbia, is providing employment for six men in this Vancouver Island town. A New York clinic has placed an order for half a ton of roots from the shrub, for use as a treatment for diabetes.

Craving For Security

People Who Are Afraid To Stand On Their Own Feet

Ottawa.—A symptom of the delirium that affects the world to-day is that "people are afraid to stand on their own feet," Lord Tweedsmuir told the local St. Andrew's Society at its annual banquet here.

"They seem to want to huddle together for security, and to sell their souls to a dictator or to a machine." He was sure the spirit of independence which dominated Scotsmen was a safeguard against this in Scotland. "But there is another thing as dangerous as this craving for a false security by surrendering freedom," said the governor-general.

"That is the modern craze for false doctrine—the jargon of to-day calls ideologies. These are creeds which seem to be accepted with a passionate devotion, as if they were new revelations, but which, for the most part, are the oldest of heresies, which were centuries ago, exploded and discarded."

NATION WIDE STRIKE IN FRANCE IS PUT DOWN

Paris.—Labor disorders broke out in eight French cities after Premier Edouard Daladier had smashed the nation-wide general strike with the threat of armed force and by military law.

At Toulouse three police inspectors and the mayor of the city were injured in clashes between strikers and police.

Large groups of workers paraded through the main streets of the city, smashing windows of stores and automobiles.

Mobile guards charged the crowd several times before restoring order. At Clermont Ferrand groups of strikers smashed store windows and attempted to seize the general commanding troops guarding the city. He brandished his revolver and escaped in an automobile.

The disorders broke out as workers left their jobs after enforced working hours.

There were few disorders as the premier compelled public service workers to stick to their jobs under military orders. Labor faculty admitted it had lost the fight with Daladier in other industries as well, stating "the use of military force" resulted in a "resumption of work."

At Lille, Lyon, Nantes, Dieppe, Grenoble and Marseille there were encounters between police and mobile guards on the one hand and fisted strikers on the other.

Guards fired into the air at Lille to break up a group of several hundred strikers who besieged them in a cafe. Lille crowds seized one of the mobile guards, tore off his helmet and took away his carbine, his cartridge belt and his automatic pistol. Eleven other guards who were patrolling with him called reinforcements by firing into the air.

In another part of Lille several hundred strikers overturned a mobile truck and fought with mobile guards until they were dispersed.

At Marseille 10 persons were arrested for attacking police.

Lyon crowds, clashed with police outside a metal factory, and at Nantes strikers and gendarmes were attacked by riotous workers. At Dieppe a police inspector was injured by dockworkers. Eleven workers at Grenoble were arrested for "violence against the police."

Organized labor of France had sought to tie up the country for one day in protest against the Daladier government's economic program. It was the first big challenge to the Daladier regime.

Daladier went ahead by ordering for France a three-year state of "economic mobilization," and turned to a campaign for parliamentary approval of his decrees imposing new taxes and suspending the 40-hour week—labor's chief target in the general strike call.

"Economic mobilization" was decreed by the "national interest," the government said in explanation of its 1939 budget demands.

"During the whole (three-year) plan," the note said, "the French must understand they are in a state of economic mobilization."

Daladier broadcast his thanks to workers for disregarding the general strike order.

He said Nov. 30 would remain "an historic date" in French history because it was marked by a renewal of "respect for law and respect for order" throughout the nation.

He declared the general strike order was a "total defeat" and emphasized his government would continue its efforts to improve the national position domestically as well as internationally.

URGES OTTAWA TO TAKE OVER ALL RELIEF COSTS

Ottawa.—If the Dominion were to administer all relief and social services, the growing list of loans to investors and creditors of western Canada could be avoided—and no great increase in federal taxation would be necessary, Hon. Stuart Garson, Manitoba provincial treasurer, submitted as public sittings of the royal commission on Dominion-provincial relations ended.

Ontario taxpayers were contributing substantially now to federal taxes from which western relief was being financed, he said. If relief administration were not nationalized, they would also contribute even more than they had in the past by increased "indirect losses," as bondholders, shareholders, insurance policy holders.

Equally important to an effective adjustment of western provincial finances, Mr. Garson said, was prompt Dominion action in a general refunding of provincial debt. Manitoba proposed refunding of its debt by the government at 3 1/2 per cent, amulating the Dominion's success in obtaining lower interest rates.

"To do nothing about this provincial debt situation is the most unsound policy that Canada can follow this time," he told the commission.

The supplementary sittings of the commission concluded, one-year and two days after its first public sittings opened at Winnipeg. At the close Premier John Bracken of Manitoba said his government had been impressed by the way the commission approached its work.

Chairman Dr. Joseph Stairs in turn complimented Manitoba for the care with which it had made the first and final presentations made by the commission. In declaring the public sittings closed, he added the proviso that they might be re-opened if special circumstances arose.

Mr. Garson suggested to the commission Ontario's chief proposal, that the Dominion relinquish the income tax to the provinces and that the provinces assume the whole burden of relief and social services, would not work because it would not solve the financial problems of the provinces. It would complicate the financial problems of the Dominion treasury, without any commensurate benefit to any province but Ontario and possibly Quebec.

The Ontario brief had emphasized each province had to live within its budgetary capacity but Chester Waters, Ontario comptroller, had stated orally Ontario recognized some provinces would continue to require Dominion assistance, he said.

Four months after that, Mr. Garson continued, Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario himself was reported as having endorsed the idea of the Dominion government assuming responsibility for relief costs. Premier Maurice Dupont of Quebec had joined in the endorsement.
